TUESDAY GUIDELINES

☐ In 1983's "Looking for Mao," Irv Drasnin's first Frontline documentary, the producer examined cultural changes in China since the 1976 death of Mao Tse-tung. In his latest film, Drasnin explores "China After Tiananmen," offering a revealing look at the country three years after the bloody 1989 massacre of student demonstrators. See the Close-up on p. 129. —8 PM 13

☐ The extraordinary life of Howard Hughes is the subject of a probing installment of A&E's Biography series that looks at the tycoon's personal life, his years in seclusion and his work as a filmmaker, industrialist and aviator. —8 PM, 12 mid. [Early Wed.] A&E 30

☐ Home Improvement repeats one of its best episodes, which pokes fun at the time-honored Christmas tradition of trying to out-decorate the neighbors and addresses the problem of telling kids "the truth" about Santa. —8:30 PM 7

☐ Movie: 1991's "Victim of Love," a steamy ★★ TV-melodrama, embroils JoBeth Williams, Pierce Brosnan and Virginia Madsen in a ménage à trois. There are undercurrents of suspense throughout the film. —9 PM 2

☐ On a rib-tickling Roseanne encore, all is not rosy when Rosey's mom, played by Estelle Parsons, comes to her bedridden daughter's aid. —9 PM 7

☐ The talents of soprano Kiri Te Kanawa are spotlighted in two back-to-back A&E offerings, beginning with My World of Opera, in which she introduces clips showcasing such luminaries as tenors Placido Domingo and Jose Carreras. That's followed by Together . . . Kiri and Andre on Broadway, teaming the chanteuse with conductor Andre Previn for a jazz-flavored pops session. Songs include "Honeysuckle Rose," "The Second Time Around" and "Autumn Leaves." —9 PM, 1 AM [Early Wed.] A&E 30

☐ Bands and singers from across the country compete for a recording contract in U.S.A. Music Challenge. Malcolm-Jamal Warner hosts the hour, which features an appearance by Jennie Garth (Beverly Hills, 90210). —10 PM 7

☐ The last Presidential primaries take place today in five states, and a CBS News Special analyzes the returns. But its focus, according to news executive Lane Venardos, is a national town meeting in which viewers can call in questions and comments on any subject. Dan Rather is the anchor. —11:30 PM 2

CHINA AFTER TIANANMEN

May 17, 1989: Students in Tiananmen Square.

"Even Chinese who saw it didn't want to believe it. The People's [Liberation] Army had been ordered to fire on its own people," says producer Irv Drasnin, recalling the June 4, 1989, massacre of students demonstrating for democracy in Beijing's Tiananmen Square. Nearly three years after the violence, Drasnin visits China to assess the country's political and economic situation.

According to Drasnin, Communist officials justified the brutal '89 crackdown as an attempt to halt "bourgeois liberalization," and examined are party efforts "to maintain its claim to the future." In the words of one hard-liner, "what we need to reform is the way people think: teach them to love communism, socialism, the state, the people, the party."

But this expanded report shows what reform means to different people. Included are segments on Chinese rock music; a school for fashion models; a personnel office that offers "the freedom to look for a better job"; a "special economic zone" designed to attract foreign investment; a training class for selling cosmetics; and China's first modern-dance troupe.
